

FLIGHT OF BRIGHAM YOUNG—THE RECENT ARRESTS—THE GENERAL IN COMMAND—A COMPROMISE SUGGESTED.

It is little known that while the feeling in the community, not only among the Moruans, but throughout the Gentile circles, is that the severest punishment will be meted out to Efrichen, no particular care seems to exist on the part of the Government to see that he is in no danger from the action of the courts. Of course Efrichen, being the grave man among them, is of necessity the greatest criminal, and in his person the sin of the people must be chiefly punished. It is not unnatural that venom should flow something of his virulence, and that the law should be made to appear against him, and that he should be the object of attack in a comparatively obnoxious dinner, in the person of a modern "Saint."

Thus when Daniel H. Wells, Moses Toot, and William H. Kimball were arrested for murder on Saturday evening last, they each and all strongly accompanied the General to the depot to take the train for Salt Lake City, and to Camp Denison, where they became the guests of the General commanding until Monday morning, when they were conveyed to the city on a writ of habeas corpus, to enable the counsel for the defense to argue the question of bail. The charges against Wells and Toot are identical with the charges against Efrichen, and the latter is the only one which Efrichen was not permitted to see.

ENGLISH AND FRENCH CALICOES—HOW TO MAKE THEM—NEW WINTER GOODS—WINTER FUR WRAPS, HATS, AND BONNETS—GLOVES.

For making dresses for home wear, the old style of plain round waist is quite obsolete. The little house-bisque and blouse waist, wide with box plaits, are the most fashionable. The plaits of the latter can be trimmed with narrow velvet or braided. To the round waist of a year ago can be added the "Isadora position," a belt of the same goods to which is added a pretty blouse, the front cut into two points, stimulating a crest, three or four inches wide, to be narrow and to fit from new to old. But, if the dress cut at the same time, the plaits left will make this a courtly and economical arrangement, giving an old-fashioned waist a quite new and stylish air. Another mode of making the blouse waist is to imitate the box plait with blue bands placed on in the same fashion. This is one of the most useful of fashions; for wearing with skirts of silk or other goods, they are made of colored flannel generally; more expensive ones of cashmere. Every handsome blouse waist is composed of white opera cloth, while merino, or other soft goods, are used for the blouse. The blouse is trimmed with wide white bands. Many skirts having outlined the waist, these are really very economical, as well as pretty additions to the wardrobe.

In fact, there is such a surge for braiding and embroidery that ladies find their time, indeed every spare moment, fully occupied with this dainty handicraft. A young lady of rather limited means, but excellent in taste and expedients, as every one should be upon whom Fortune refuses to smile, having occasion for a new dress for evening and, being forced to fall back upon her materials and to make her own dress, she took up the long train was cut into a double-train, half short; the upper skirt, which is no longer absolutely necessary, was turned into a blouse waist; the box plaits were beautifully embroidered in cherry silks, with broad cream

Narrow gauge roads are no new thing under the sun. They have been successfully worked during the months of Pennsylvania's latest half year, or nearly so. At Scranton you can get statistics of cost of a narrow gauge road showing that it costs not more than half as much of the broad gauge. It is not quite as economical for passengers, yet it is not uneconomical, and it is feasible to build such roads in sections where a broad gauge would be built. The immense amount of coal carried upon the Cambria road proves its great adaptability to the purpose.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has nothing against a narrow gauge. But my principal object in writing this note is not to advocate the narrow gauge, but to show that the plan is not impracticable. I want to show that the plan is new and untried; for it is as old as the railroad system of this country, Florida, Fla.

BOWDITCH ASSAULTS.

A Coroner took the ante-mortem statement yesterday of Charles G. Jackson, lying dangerously wounded in St. Luke's Hospital. On the evening of October 1, Jackson, with two friends, met three disreputable men women and took them to his room, at No. 30 East 12th street. The first of the women was Mrs. Latham, and introducing them to Mrs. Latham, the man, who is at present conveying the said Latham to his acquaintance, Mrs. Latham objected to receiving them, and Jackson, who was under the influence of liquor, used language and committed violence. Her husband, seeing a room poker, hit him several blows on the head, fracturing his skull. Neither of the women was injured, but the man, in a fit of rage, struck Jackson at the time, and continued his assault, and not until Saturday was he taken seriously ill and removed to St. Luke's Hospital. A verdict against Jackson was assented to by the jury, and he was committed to the House of Detention. Jackson not long ago inherited money by the death of a relative in Ireland, and has since drunk to excess.

John Flackback, a laborer, living at Pell and Mott-streets, while passing along Mott-street near Bayard-st. early yesterday morning, was assaulted by Patrick Sullivan and John Gray, who struck him several times on the head with a club, and then, knuckled him down, and kicked him until he was unconscious. He was taken to the police house in Franklin-st. Police station. The injured man was taken to St. Luke's Hospital, and, as he was deemed to be in a critical condition, his ante-mortem statement was taken.

Morris Stack quarreled early yesterday with Daniel Quinn, in the liquor store No. 75 Washington-street, and was wounded by the latter with a broadsword, inflicting a dangerous wound. Flynn recovered.
